10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Oddfellows Hall (fmr), Leederville, a two storey limestone building designed in the Federation Free Classical style, with single storey later brick additions to the rear, has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:

the place was purpose-built in 1897 for the Grand United Order of Odd Fellows to provide medical services and financial assistance prior to these matters becoming government-managed social services.

the place is a rare extant example of a mutual benefit society building in metropolitan Western Australia. Few buildings of the Odd Fellows movement remain in Western Australia; and the façade of the place is a fine example of Federation Free Classical Style architecture.

The interior of Oddfellows Hall (fmr), Leederville has been considerably altered and is of little cultural heritage significance.

The single storey brick additions to the rear are also of little cultural heritage significance.
