10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Victoria Park Police Station, a single-storey Federation Free Style brick building with a corrugated iron roof, has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:

the place displays a striking aesthetic character through the concentration of contrasting stylistic features in the domestic scale of the building; the place has been a familiar local landmark on the main thoroughfare through Victoria Park since 1908 and contributes to the local community's sense of place; and, the place demonstrates the civic architecture of the Public Works Department and the development of the Federation Free Style under the guidance of the chief architect, Hillson Beasley.
