10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE
Mill Workers' Hall, a single-storey, timber framed building, containing a main hall and a lesser hall, has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:
 - the place was one of the earliest community buildings in the townsite of Pemberton;
 - the place is closely associated with the early phases of development of the State Sawmills and has links to the social life of Group Settlers in the region;
 - the place is highly valued by the Pemberton community for its ongoing social, cultural and educational associations;

the place contributes to the community's sense of place by providing an historic and social link with the early timber industry of the area; and, the place has aesthetic qualities arising from its general conformity with the timber vernacular in use in the Pemberton townsite.
