10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE
Osborne Primary School, comprising a brick and corrugated iron school building, a brick and iron former teacher's quarters, and associated buildings, playgrounds and plantings, has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:

the place forms a relatively intact example of a Western Australian primary school which has developed from a one room semi-rural school to a school serving a large suburban population resulting from the growth of the surrounding area in the post World War Two period. It illustrates the development of a school in the context of a developing community; it contributes to the community's sense of place by providing a focus and an identity for the local community;

the buildings are typical of school buildings designed by the Public Works Department; the place provides a green space which contrasts in scale and simplicity with the intensive residential development which now surrounds it; and, the place represents the development and role of education, provided by Government-operated schools, in communities in Western Australia from the early 1900s.
