Hammond Park Rotunda, a timber framed rotunda, has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:

as an important cultural and social meeting place for Kalgoorlie residents and as a former focal point for local entertainment, the place has a high social value;

it is one of the largest rotundas of its type in Western Australia; and, it is a well proportioned and pleasing rotunda enhanced by a unique onion dome with a spire and crescent moon raised above the roof apex, a decorative cast-iron frieze, timber arches and infill, and columns that give the structure a light filigree character.
