10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE
Northam Railway Station (fmr), a Federation Free Style, single-storey, brick, iron and timber building, has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:
 - the place is highly valued by the community, both of the township and the wider agricultural district, for its former role as a transport interchange for passengers, produce, machinery and supplies;
 - the place has high aesthetic value;

the place is on the site of the original railway through the area, a site that, for a time, became the focus of business occupation of that sector of the town; and, as an important station in the railway link to the goldfields, the place provides evidence of a significant period of industrial history in Western Australia.
