10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE
Murchison Club Hotel, a two-storey Victorian Georgian style stone, brick and iron hotel, has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:
 - its continuity of function throughout the century is significant to the community of Cue and surrounding districts for its social and cultural services;
 - it has been the main meeting place in Cue throughout the twentieth century where a range of functions, from receptions for the Governor to informal lunches and drinks after work, are held;
 - it contributes to the community's sense of place because of its longevity of function and the strong physical presence of the place;

the place has significance to the town of Cue as a landmark because of its prominent position and physical dominance of the streetscape; and it is significant to the community of Cue because it is associated with the two periods of growth associated with gold mining in the region - 1892-c. 1920 and the 1930s.
