10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

House at 84 Stirling Street, a single-storey brick and iron residence, has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:

it is an elegant, harmonious and picturesque dwelling, forming part of the edge to the scenic Leschenault Inlet foreshore in Stirling Street, and part of the Stirling Street precinct;

it demonstrates the turn-of-the-century expansion of the suburbs of Bunbury along the Inlet, following the gradual subdivision of the historic Stirling estate (Location 26); and is an example of a developed form of late nineteenth century cottage, at a turning point of stylistic development in the history of Western Australian domestic architecture;

it has a close association with George Robert Teede, first Government School teacher and first Clerk of the Town in Bunbury;

it has scientific value as a teaching site with respect to the class of elementary early Western Australian houses; and, it contributes to the visual coherence and historic authenticity of the Stirling Street-Austral Parade precinct, as an urban space contributing to the community's sense of place in Bunbury.

The assessment does not include the garage outbuilding.
