10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE
Cooper's Lime Kilns, two lime kilns and features associated with the former operation of the kilns, has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:

the kilns are stylistically unusual and display innovative methods of construction. The method of extracting the lime from the kiln once it had burned is uncommon, as is their location close to the coast (approx. 500 metres); the place has the potential to yield archaeological deposits which relate to the lime burning industry and the activities and lifestyles of people during the 1930s Depression, including assisted migrants;

the kilns have aesthetic value due to their weathered appearance and vernacular construction;

the place is associated with the Cooper family, who were early residents in the Quinn's Rocks area and with Albert Facey, who became a popular Western Australian literary figure; and the place is associated with the long history of Western Australia's lime burning industry and with the development of Quinn's Rocks'.
