10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE
Charles Street Methodist Mission Chapel and Methodist Church, consisting of a timber framed, weatherboard and corrugated iron roofed chapel, and a limestone, brick quoined and zincalume roofed church, have cultural heritage significance for the following reasons :
 - the place is important aesthetically for its landmark quality and as an important component of an historic precinct;
 - the place has historic importance as it demonstrates the pattern of suburban evolution of the metropolitan area following the Gold Rush;
 - the place had an important social value to the community and members of the Methodist Church for ninety-six years and, while not currently serving its intended use, the social value has continued for many who recall using these buildings for religious and social activities;

as a sequential pair of a pre-gold rush timber chapel and a gold rush stone and brick church, the place has a high rarity value; and, the individual buildings are representative examples of their architectural genre.
