10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE
Kalgoorlie Miner Building, a three-storey Federation Free Classical style commercial building, has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:

the place has prominence in Hannan Street with its facade treatment of painted and cement relief work on the upper levels;

the place contributes to the visual character of Hannan Street with its verandah roof over the pavement and parapet; and, the place has a long association with the publication of goldfields newspapers (Kalgoorlie Miner and Western Argus), and a close association with the Hocking family (in particular Sidney Edwin Hocking), who as editors/owners of the Kalgoorlie Miner (and Western Argus) were prominent citizens of the Kalgoorlie community.
