10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE
Streeter's Jetty, a timber-framed jetty, built in several stages, has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:
  - the place was central to the Broome based pearling operations of prominent London jewellers, E W Streeter and Co., who later became Streeter and Male, from the time of its construction in 1886 until the 1980s;
  - the place was an integral component of Broome's tramway system, constructed in 1899 with a branch to Streeter's Jetty which was accessed up until 1994 over land now known as Lot 3067. The jetty is one of the few remaining elements of the system;

the place has been a visual landmark and focal point of the Broome townsite from its construction in 1886;

the place is a visual reminder of Broome's pearling industry and as such is of social significance to the Broome community and to visitors from elsewhere in the State, interstate and overseas; and,

the place is a valued recreational asset to the community.
