Strelitz Buildings has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:

the place contributes to the physical character of Fremantle's West End and its identity as the State's principal shipping and commercial centre at the beginning of the 20th century;

the unusual display of Free Classical details gives Strelitz Buildings a distinctive character, which contributes to the visual richness of the West End; and, the place has a strong association with the Strelitz brothers, Paul and Richard, and, through them, with the development of commercial and local government activities in Perth and Fremantle.
