10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE
Cottesloe Police Station (fmr), a single storey limestone and brick work building constructed in the Federation Queen Anne style in 1908, has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:
 - the place has aesthetic value as a good example of a competently designed and well constructed institutional building in the Federation Queen Anne style;
 - the place, together with the adjacent Cottesloe Primary School (1897-1910) and the Cottesloe Infants School (fmr) form a small but important precinct of institutional buildings designed by the Public Works Department in the late nineteenth and early twentieth century;
 - the place has notable landmark qualities;
 - the place is representative of the development of the Western Australian Police Forces at the turn of the century, and is representative of a period when the residential quarters for the Officer

In Charge and the operations of the police station were incorporated within the one building; and, the place is associated with the development of Cottesloe and Peppermint Grove and represents the subsequent need to establish a permanent base for police operations in this suburban area. The place operated as a police station from 1908 to 1970.

There are no other outbuildings, structures or landscape elements on the site that have any cultural heritage significance.
