10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Edenvale Group has cultural heritage significance for the following:

together with St. John's Church and the Old Pinjarra School, the place forms an important component of the colonial township of Pinjarra;

the place has a close association with the McLarty family - a prominent family in the Murray District; in particular Edward McLarty and Sir Ross McLarty who contributed to the development of political life of the State, at a high level, from 1894 to 1962; the place contributes to the community's sense of place by providing a physical and social link with the past economic development and political importance of the Murray District and, in particular, Pinjarra;

the place demonstrates the principal characteristics of the Old Colonial Georgian style of architecture in Western Australia (Liveringa), and provides a good example of the Victorian Regency style of architecture (Edenvale), which has been adapted to include an unusual symmetrical spreading and faceted homestead; and, the place is representative of nineteenth century homestead development, with the fabric of both Edenvale and Liveringa, and associated buildings, incorporating response to change over time and expressing indicators of the development of regional and local prosperity in tandem with the State's development.
