10. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE
Allandale Homestead, a single-storey stone and timber dwelling with a corrugated iron roof and an adjacent water tower and stone cellar, has cultural heritage significance for the following reasons:
 - the place has a close association with the development of the fishing and fish canning industries in the Mandurah region making it a significant reminder of one of the most important periods in the development of Mandurah;
 - it is significant for its association with the Dawe family, one of the first families to settle in the area;

it has a landmark quality within the local environment because of its prominent location on an elevated site;

it contributes to the community's sense of place by demonstrating evidence of the once thriving commercial fishing industry in the region; and, it is rare as it has survived relatively unchanged since construction through the continuous ownership and occupation by one family for most of this century.
